Getting off to a good start

Contributed by Mitch (FINesse)
Saturday, 30 August 2008

OK , I for one do not buy into preseason hype. Going 3-1 is better than 1-3 but you guys know I am not one to start drinking the kool aid. Now we have our first 2 games against the Jets & Cardinals , 2 teams who I think like us , plain & simple are just not that good. We have to get out of these games 2-0. As for the jets , this turn around has gotta start by first winning our home games against division opponents when the game counts. What I mean by that is beating the Jets in week 1 when there is something to play for & not beating the Patriots in week 15 when they have clinched & have decided to rest their starters & drop kick extra points.

Then the Cardinals , this is just what we need to get , a road win early to boost confidence , go up against a team that is a very winable game for us.

Beyond that , I just dont know. I am one of those guys who are thinking 6 wins ... maybe. But what I do know is if we start off 0-2 we will be once gain reading the threads entitled (With the First pick in the 2009 draft the Miami Dolphins select ..."

I just dont need to see that in week 3.