Will the real Dolphins please stand up!

Contributed by Mitch
Friday, 03 October 2008

Here we are in week 5 and I think this could be a real telling week for this team. Consider all this. San Diego certainly one of the better teams in the AFC and by all accounts might be & should be undefeated right now come in riding a 2 game winning streak with both their defense & offense improving & healthy. The Dolphins at home after really beating up the Patriots on the road & although some will say it was a shell of the Patriots , still a road win like that is impressive.

This will be a real good test for this team. Probably a game that most of us had penciled in as a loss , after what happened 2 weeks ago we will see if we should get out the big pitcher for all the kool aid we have been drinking.

So Dolphin fans if this team has really any shot of riding that bus we have been talking about in the forum , we will know after this week. Its one thing to beat a good team when they are down , but its another to beat a good team when they are on top of their game. With the fact we are at home , makes the odds even better.

By Sunday night we should know what team this really is.