Miami has made a move to solidify the offensive line, as they have agreed to terms on a 1 year deal with former Atlanta Falcon ORT Tyson Clabo. The 31 year old Clabo graded out as the 5th best ORT in 2012 per the Pro Football Focus ratings, and at 6'6, 329 lbs, Clabo is strong in both run and pass blocking. Clabo has always been in a power blocking scheme, but the Dolphins had him in for a workout this week and liked what they saw and feel comfortable with his ability to fit into a zone blocking schme, as they did with OLT Jake Long as well, who was considered more of a power player.

While Armando Salguero of the Miami Herald still thinks the Brandon Albert deal could possibly still happens, I think Miami is comfortable with Jonathan Martin at his natural position of OLT. It is a big leap of faith the Dolphins are showing in Martin, and he had worked hard to improve his strength and power and has put on 15 lbs of muscle during the off season. We will see what Miami does, but Martin seems to be the choice to be the OLT going into the 2012 season.
