

What a difference a few weeks make.

Contributed by FINesse
Friday, 05 September 2008

So , maybe about a month ago as we flipped thru our schedules & adding W's or L's next to each game to get some kind of prediction on how the Dolphins would do this year , at the very beginning we saw a game that only mattered to us as it was against the stinkin Jets. We thought - there is a game we might be able to win as it was the home opener & emotions would be high & the Jets would be bringing their new 120 million dollar apyroll but would either have a unproven second year starter at QB or the guy we loved to call "Noodle arm". Also it would be a game between a 1 win team & a 4 win team from last season , surley a game that the rest of the country's only attention to it would be to read the final score on the ticker & then probably laugh.

But in just a few short weeks this ho hum game has taken on a life & a story line all its own.

Who would of thought that the Jets would come in here with Brett Favre as their starting QB & that the Dolphins hopes would be on that guy we called noodle arm. Now the game goes National with Phil Simms & Jim Nance doing the coverage.

But this is the NFL & as once pointed out that it could stand for Not For Long. Just as the prospects of watching a boring game between 2 bad teams did not last very long , hopefully the recent Dolphin woes of past seasons wont last for long either.

Its finally here guys, football that counts. Sundays at Hooters with Wings & Drafts ... is there anything better?? Enjoy it!!!