

Why & how to watch the Dolphins/Cardinals Game.

The Dolphins are definitely in rebuild-mode this year, so, why watch this game? I'll tell you why: to watch the development of rookie QB Ryan Tannehill. What do I think of Tannehill so far? I think it's a no-brainer that Tannehill is no Dan Marino. Quarterbacks like Danny come by once in a lifetime. One thing I will say that in parts of the Jets game, Tannehill looked a lot like Henne in running a very stagnant offense, but he moved the ball into position to win when we needed to. I see a lot of promise in him to where he can be a very good quarterback starter for us. So, get ready for some ups and downs as the ride will be a little bumpy this year.

Our defense has been playing some dominating football, so, maybe we'll see a little of this, too.

If you are not in South Florida, the Florida panhandle, or Arizona, you will be out of luck watching this game on your local HDTV unless you have The NFL Ticket from DirecTV. No worries though. If you have a laptop you can watch it with us. Scroll down to the bottom of this blog and I will tell you how to watch it.

Phinfever Game Chat

We hope that you will join us 4 pm Sunday (come sooner if you would like) for the Dolphins/Cardinals game.

The Phinfever Sports Bar (chat room) is embedded in our forum, so, you will have to be logged into our forum before you can access the chat room. From what I understand, Firefox works best with our Flash software. I use Google Chrome for the chat. Internet Explorer 8 users have connection problems.

If you are looking for a streaming link to watch the game or a radio station, we can definitely tell you where you can go to get it. The best thing is getting together with other Dolphins fans around the country and sharing your observations on each play.

So, come on by ... and bring extra wings and refreshments for the rest of us. I prefer Dos Equis and I like my wings medium hot;)
