

Stay the Course ... Please!!

Being 4-4 at this point in the season & with many more winnable games left on the schedule I think we need to be reminded how far we have come & that greed can put us right back where we came from.

The course that this regime has put forward while sometimes still criticized seems to be on the right track. While there are no real clear strong teams in the AFC except for Tennessee & Pittsburgh, having wins over teams like Denver, New England & San Diego no matter how depleted those teams are surely makes us relevant again.

Which is why I still get tired of seeing those threads about signing overpriced guys who have been cut with really no merit except name recognition when they were once in their prime. No team is going to cut a KGB or Deane Hall for no reason & it is time to realize that. Getting greedy & signing these guys would kill the chemistry that this team is building. It's about the draft.. overpriced guys whether they come via free agency or the waiver wire will not make this team much better. Save the cap space as we have guys now who can actually run a successful draft. Just say no to primadonnas. In these times of change I can only hope that this franchise will do just that & not go back to their ways of the past few years.

I'm off to Miami, next stop web weekend & as always I am grateful for the opportunity to attend!
